Ukraine

Welcome Speech

I work for the Prime Ministers Office as the Social Contact Deputy Headmaster Office's acting director. The present government emphasis its activity's openness. Last year there was a government programme which dealt with the Openness, Activity and Effectiveness, that is to see who is doing what and what the issue of it is. The present government programme's name is Consistency, Actuality and Responsibility.

This means that our Office has a lot to do and we are responsible for these works to be done in time. The main emphasis is on the development of communication that is able to find the common language between the government and the inhabitants, in Ukraine. Our aim is that the government's policy should get the support from the Ukrainian people. At present we are looking for international relationships, international foundations and other organizations with the help of them we could take over different theoretical methods and technologies without difficulties.

Today's conference's main topic is the environmental protection, but it is not so simple, it is also about the different peoples and cultures dialogue. I am here as an informal representative, but I can answer your question if you have concrete questions. I would like to thank you the organizers that I could be here and I am happy that you chose Kiev to be the venue of this conference. As a representative I would like to welcome the neighbouring countries' delegations and I wish you all the best.
